Paris by Gastlight.
The boulevards of Paris, extending for miles through almost all sections of the city, present a gay scene at night. The thousands of cars, brilliant with gas jets, have their tables all out on the broad pavements, and from 8 to 10 o'clock in the evening it is difficult to obtain a seat at any of them. Ice-cream and coffee to the extent of the Parisian's indulgence, though a few add some cognac to their coffee. They spend their summer evenings in promenade along the boulevards and occasionally stopping for a cup of their favorite beverage. The sidewalks of the boulevards are not less than thirty feet wide, and in many prominent places women with chairs to rent are stationed along the curbstones, on which those who are tired may for a few minutes rest themselves and view the promenaders as they pass. The broad streets are also filled with carriages, so that it is difficult to effect a crossing, each being required by law to have their lamps burning. Strangers in the city, who wish to view these gas-light scenes, generally engage carriages and drive slowly through the different boulevards, and vast numbers of carriages are constantly passing to and from the various places of amusement. Everybody seems happy and intent upon enjoyment. The people of Vienna are equally fond of this out-of-door life, but prefer to assemble in the gardens and listen to the music of their unrivalled bands. Eating and drinking beer and coffee, seem to employ all the leisure hours of the Viennese. They seldom care to walk, the streets of Vienna being comparatively deserted at night, and most of the stores closed, whilst the very reverse is the case in Paris. The stores are not only brilliantly lighted, but nearly all of them have rows of gas-lights on the outside, making the streets almost as light as day. The display of the stores last night on the Boulevard des Capucines exceeded anything we have ever before seen even in Paris. It seemed as if all the goods in the grand central building of the Vienna Exposition were spread along among these magnificent establishments. The taste with which the goods are arranged, the disposition of the lights, and the reflection in the side-glasses with which their windows are always provided, presented a continuous spectacle of surpassing beauty. Ten years ago the Palais Royal was the great centre of attraction of Paris, but the boulevard stores have so greatly exceeded these small establishments that it is now comparatively deserted at night. The hundreds of jewellers and precious stones, and even the fancy and dry goods stores tried to excel the other in the effort to attract the attention of the throngs of promenaders.

We walked through some of these central boulevards last night for nearly two hours, and everywhere the pavements were so filled that it was difficult for three to walk abreast without being continually jostled by the promenaders. This was also the case in the arcades running through the interior of the squares, where the display was equally attractive. The best possible order and quiet was everywhere preserved, and the gendarmes with their huge cavalry swords stood like statues on the corners of the streets, having no occasion to do more than remain quietly at their posts. There being no cobblestone pavements in Paris the carriages and omnibuses made little or no noise as they glided along on the smooth asphaltum, nor was there any dust for them to stir up to vex the eyes and lungs of the people. The sweeping-machines are going all night and until 10 o'clock in the morning, making the streets as clean as they could be swept with a broom by hand, and last night dust should be left in the crevices, they are washed off with the hose. In short, Paris is grand. She has passed through her tribulations, and has again presented herself to the world more beautiful and attractive than ever. That the world is pleased is evident by the many thousands of strangers now lingering here to enjoy the brilliant spectacle.—C. C. Fulton.

THE TARRING AND FEATHERING MYSTERY.
—It will be remembered that in November, 1872, Charles G. Kelsey, a young farmer of Huntington, L. I., mysteriously disappeared after having been tarred and feathered, and it is charged, brutally mutilated by a party of masked men. The reason for the outrage was the alleged persecution by Kelsey of a young lady of the village with attentions which were not welcome to her. The brother of Kelsey and some friends insisted that he had been murdered and his body thrown into the sound. Dr. Banks, Royal Sanitarium and other prominent citizens were arrested and indicted for conspiracy, there being no direct evidence of murder. Since then, says the New York Express, the affair has been the leading topic of discussion in that part of Long Island, and the excitement has been renewed by the finding, on Friday, of a portion of a human body floating in the water near Oyster Bay, which is supposed to be the part of the remains of the missing man. The upper part of the body, down to the waist, was entirely gone, and the feet had also disappeared. A pair of pantaloons and drawers covered the legs, which were comparatively well preserved. The pantaloons were buttoned at the waist, and in the pocket was a watch chain, which was identified by his brothers. It is supposed that heavy weights had been attached to the body, which held it down until enough had been taken away to release them, when the remains of the body rose. The New York Post, however, says that the counsel for Banks and others implicated believe the whole thing to be a trick to influence the local election in Huntington, where "the tar question" has entered largely into the political canvass.

GREEN'S NOTION HOUSE
RETAIL DEPARTMENT.
This Department affords great advantages to retail purchasers.
A moderate profit upon package prices has been, and shall continue to be, my motive power.
Placing large orders insures great advantages to buyers. These facts are known to every merchant.
My constantly increasing trade in every Department of my business will warrant a closer profit than goods have ever been sold at before, and with a stock of goods in this line of Ladies' & Gents' Furn'g Goods,
Hosiery, Gloves, Underwear, Zephyr Worsted, Embroidery Materials, Belts, Laces, Scarfs, Dress Trimmings, Buttons, Jewelry, Real Hair Goods, &c., &c., which will be larger than the combined stocks of the city. I can, without doubt say to all that it will be to their interest at least to look through this and make a note of the quantity, quality and price.

MAMMOTH STOCK.
Goods retailed as heretofore at a fraction only above wholesale figures. This can be readily done, as the extra discounts of manufacturers and importers are in many instances quite large. My stock is now full and complete in all departments, and the wants of every one can be supplied.
Fortunately for myself and customers, chronic croakers have no influence in these quarters, and I shall continue to oppose any combination to maintain extortionary prices.
Thanking my customers and friends both in and out of the city for their liberal patronage, confidence and influence during the past seven years, I hereby further assure them that in the future as in the past I shall exert myself to maintain a stock of goods that will do credit to Alexandria and continue to attract trade from all the surrounding country.
During the approaching season other Departments will be added to stock, each of which will be complete in every particular.
Goods wholesaled at prices as low as any jobbing house in New York.
